

Guests at the Amsterdam Manor get a taste of Himno y Bandera Day

It was a high-energy show and a sampling of entertainment to come at the Amsterdam Manor's Managers Cocktail Party on Thursday evening. An unusual treat was presented to the guests of the resort aside from the usually terrific entertainment by The Jacobs, who perform at the Amsterdam Manor regularly.

Akeira, Natasha, Anna, Monique and Michelle dressed in the costumes of their alter egos as the Eagle Beach Dancers proved that most Aruban women have a natural sense of rhythm when it comes to native music and dance. Resort guests know them in their day-to-day secret identities of hotel employees, but put them in folkloric costume and their super powers are revealed as they shine on the dance floor.

Much to the enjoyment of those attending the party for the great price on island concoctions and delicious Dutch snacks complements of the management, the Eagle Beach Dancers provided an exciting hour of entertainment and a taste of things to come during the special Himno y Bandera Celebration that will be at the Amsterdam Manor on Saturday Night. Not only did the girls put on a special show, but also the dance and singing performance of nine-year-old Celiandra Jacobs proved to be worth the trip to the resort alone. Celiandra and her proud papa, Francis, put on quite a show every week, joined by brother John Francis on the drums and sister Francella providing vocals. This entertaining group had island visitors mastering the moves to carnival dances in no time, and little Francella paid homage to Britney Spears with an amusing rendition of "Oops, I've done it again" that needs to be seen to be fully appreciated.

The terrace of the Mango Restaurant is a lovely place to dine and enjoy the sunset, and it will be delicious and rousing Himno y Bandera celebration on Saturday night. Reservations and information for this special evening can be obtained by calling the resort at telephone #527-1100.
